Inside Rwanda’s Gacaca Courts

Seeking Justice after Genocide

BERT INGELAERE

★ Winner of the Bethwell A. Ogot Prize for best book in East African Studies, African Studies Association

The difficult path to peace in the wake of horrific crimes

“Rigorous and reliable. It has much to say about the difficulties of reconciliation politics. . . . Essential.”—Choice

“Masterful. . . . Provides a balanced, nuanced assessment of Rwanda’s local courts, showing how diverse social dynamics influenced both the operations of gacaca and its outcomes in different local communities. Essential reading for anyone interested in transitional justice and conflict resolution, in Rwanda and beyond.”—Catharine Newbury, Smith College

“A model for how to get at local understandings of grassroots mechanisms. His findings suggest cautionary lessons for anyone interested in making postconflict justice and reconciliation more community-based.”—Lars

Waldorf, University of York

After the 1994 genocide in Rwanda, victims, perpetrators, and the country as a whole struggled to deal with the legacy of the mass violence. The government responded by creating a new version of a traditional grassroots justice system called gacaca. Bert Ingelaere offers a comprehensive assessment of what these courts set out to do, how they worked, what they achieved, what they did not achieve, and how they affected Rwandan society. Weaving together vivid first-hand recollections, interviews, and trial testimony with systematic analysis, he documents how the gacaca shifted over time from confession to accusation, from restoration to retribution. This is an authoritative account of one of the most important experiments in transitional justice after mass violence.
